JAMES COX BRADY AND BRIDE ARRIVE HOME FROM LONDON

He and Former Miss McMahon Decline to Discuss Their Marriage Abroad.

James Cox Brady, who recently married Miss Helen McMahon of Flushing, arrived yesterday with his bride on board the Imperator, occupying the imperial suite on the trip from Southampton. Their names were not on the printed passenger list and they said they had nothing to say about their marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Brady went from the pier to his home at 10 East Seventy-sixth street.

While the marriage of Mr. Brady and Miss McMahon early in October was something of a surprise to their friends here, the romance had been known for several months. Mr. Brady, who is a son of the late Anthony N. Brady, and been married twice before he wedded Miss McMahon. His first wife was Miss Mrs. Elizabeth Hamilton of Albany, who was killed in a train wreck in 1912. He married Lady Victoria Percy, daughter of the Earl of Limerick, in 1915. She died two years ago.

Other voyagers arriving by the Imperator were Mrs. Hermann Oeric, who was ill throughout the trip, and her son, Hermann Oeric, who were not at the pier by Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt III and her daughter, Miss Muriel.

Townsend Martin Countess Jacques de Lespauls, Duncan Cameron and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Turner were also passengers.

His Skinner in Grand Opera of Movies

Edward Knoblock's Oriental Drama Produced With Lavish Detail at Strand.

"Kismet" is the grand opera of the movies. At the Strand an Oriental overture and the incidental music to this picture, marking the film debut of His Skinner—almost the last of the old guard of legitimate actors who roamed from the screen—was used to feel that with a little more Verdi added to the performance, the theatre management might have reason to establish a diamond horseshoe of honor.

Adapted under Louis Gessier's direction from the gorgeous Oriental thriller in which His Skinner so successfully brought the atmosphere of "Chou-Khuyuan" to the screen, it adheres closely to the lines of Edward Knoblock's drama, yet seems to move more briskly, with a wealth of that lavish detail which the modern picture companies could almost reproduce Utopia on the screen if so desired.

From one sunrise to the next, the beggar at the Mosque of the Carpetweavers in ancient Baghdad, the music of the East, the dazzling position of one high in the grace of the Wazir, the second highest dignitary of that picturesque city, has an opportunity to show his failings and his faults, while his daughter, the beautiful bride of the "all highest," which looks like an honor, but considering the anomalous position of Oriental cities, is like a beggar's son of the father upon the child.

Makes Himself Welcome. In this brief span of twenty-four hours all the possible vicissitudes of human experience seem plucked—the willfully elderly beggar in his attic and attic, whose temperance is ruffled when she discovers he is not really a man about town, but a beggar in disguise.

His tone did not assume an especially rich quality in the resonant auditorium, but it was smooth and well graded. His finger and bow execution was excellent, except at times in the first movement, and his straightforward treatment of the unaffected old composition entirely satisfactory.

Klaw Buys Land for Two Theatres to Cost $2,225,000

Announces Plans for Group of Buildings in West Forty-sixth Street.

Marc Klaw, president of Marc Klaw, Inc., theatrical producers, announced yesterday that he had purchased from the Astor estate through the Farmers Loan and Trust Company a plot 225 by 100 feet on the south side of Forty-sixth street, between Broadway and Eighth avenue, for the erection of two large theatres, a roof garden and an office building to be ready by the autumn of 1921.

The new theatres will make Mr. Klaw the owner in his own name of four legitimate theatres in this city. The front of the building will be constructed on the lot between Broadway and Eighth avenue, and the rear portion will be built on the lot between Broadway and Eighth avenue.

Within one block of the new theatres are the Fulton, the Astor, the Bijou, the Booth and the Plymouth.

SAM'L H. WHEELER DIES; MADE SEWING MACHINES

President of Big Company for Eleven Years.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 14.—Samuel H. Wheeler, formerly president of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine Company, died today in Chicago, according to word received at his home in Fairfield, Conn. He had been visiting friends in Chicago and was taken ill two weeks ago.

Mr. Wheeler was born in Watertown, Conn., seventy-five years ago. After being graduated from Yale, in 1863, he went to Chicago, where he was in business for many years in the firm of Farwell & Wheeler. Coming to this city in 1894, he joined in establishing the Wheeler & Wilson Company, of which concern he was president for eleven years. He was owner of the Stratfield Hotel and the Newfield Building in this city, as well as other property. He was a director of the Connecticut National Bank.

In 1875 Mr. Wheeler married Miss Ann V. Vernon Runney of Chicago. She died in New York, and he later married Miss Elizabeth, who survives him.
